Today, fiftieth day of Easter and the Solemnity of Pentecost, brings Easter Time to a close. The Church has been invited to renew its faith during these fifty days of Easter so that it might be prepared to accept the Lord's peace as an invitation to work with the Spirit for the world's transformation.

The Holy Spirit's descent at Pentecost is often heralded for its drama, complete with tongues of fire and the cacophony of diverse languages. While it is dramatic, it is the theological value of the story that deserves our attention.

First, the descent of the Holy Spirit occurs during the Jewish festival of Shavuot. This originally was one of the three pilgrimage festivals to Jerusalem; it later came to commemorate the giving of the Law on Mount Sinai. The Shavuot festival probably had taken on the second meaning by the time of Luke's writing. Therefore, it is likely that the Spirit's descent is intended to enact the giving of the New Law.

The second theological point to consider is the meaning of tongues of fire. The tongue is a symbol of speech or language. Because the Spirit descends upon each person individually, we are meant to see the validation of a diversity of languages. What takes place at Pentecost is the overturning of the punishment at Babel (Gen 11:1-9), where the unity of speech was brought to confusion, causing the people to separate into many tribes. The Spirit unites what has been previously divided.

Finally, this leads to the third theological principle, universalism. From the upper room, where they had previously huddled in fear, the Holy Spirit moves them to the outside world. They are to reach out to all. Because there were many foreigners gathered in Jerusalem for the celebration of the feast, Luke is demonstrating that the infant Church has the mission to take the Good News beyond the confines of Jerusalem. A Family Perspective

Today’s gospel tells us God actually wants to take up residence in your family. “We will come and make our home with you.” Every family is called to be a tabernacle where God dwells. Is Jesus a permanent member of your family or a temporary guest? Today the promise is given. The choice is ours.
